Call for Papers

Your use of online education strategies and/or technologies as part of a course or instructional program.

Submit a short (2 to 4 page) paper focusing on your use of online education strategies and/or technologies as part of a course or instructional program. This can be an asynchronous, synchronous, blended or face to face course, activity or program. Follow the template given below in submitting your paper. The papers will be reviewed by the SEALS Electronic Education Committee. Abstracts for papers meeting the template criteria will be published in the SEALS 2017 Electronic Education Program, and will be made available in full on the SEALS 2017 Electronic Education web site. Authors of accepted papers will be offered the opportunity to present their paper, either in person or online, at the SEALS 2017 conference.

Friday, January 20, 2017 is the deadline for submissions. Papers may be submitted via e-mail or postmarked no later than Friday, January 20, 2017 to:
